What type of product is this?

Type

The Hedging Options for your BestOf Share Option Plan are Share Options on an index with a ten-year term.

Objectives

Employers who start a BestOf Share Option Plan, write Share Options on shares of a fund and offer these Share Options to their employees free of charge with respect to diversification of the remuneration package.

The BestOf Share Options confer the right to purchase shares of the underlying fund at the Exercise Price during their ten-year term. The Share Options may also be terminated vis-à-vis the employer during the Exercise Period, after a lock-up period of one year from the Issue Date of the BestOf Share Option Plan.

By writing these BestOf Share Options, the employer assumes the obligation, upon exercise, to deliver the underlying shares at the Exercise Price and there is a risk that this may be lower than their market value and the employer thereby risks incurring capital losses. The employer can hedge this risk by purchasing Hedging Options from KBC Bank. These Hedging Options are written on an Index which shows numerous similarities with the fund on which the BestOf Share Options have been written; however, the two underlying assets are not identical.

The value of the Hedging Options primarily depends on the underlying asset. The underlying asset offers no guaranteed return and can fluctuate significantly in value. In addition, both an increase in and a decrease of the underlying asset may entail leverage. The value of the underlying asset therefore increases/declines more relative to and depending on increases/declines in the value of the Hedging Options.

The value of the Hedging Options is also affected by other parameters, such as market volatility, movements in interest rates, dividends, and the term and Exercise Price of the Hedging Options.

The Hedging Options cannot be exercised. They can, however, be terminated during the exercise period vis-à-vis KBC Bank.

If the Hedging Options are not terminated before their maturity date, they will be automatically exercised in cash on maturity.

Termination is subject to the fee determined by KBC Bank NV acting as the counterparty.

The offer does not constitute a public offering within the meaning of the Prospectus Legislation.

The BestOf Share Option and the Hedging Option incorporate a guaranteed benefit. This guaranteed benefit is equal to the amount of tax actually paid by the employee per BestOf Share Option.
